Kerala, Rajasthan top India's first state index for energy efficiency

- On 1 August, India's Bureau of Energy Efficiency (BEE), a sub-agency of the Ministry of Power, released the country's first energy efficiency index for Indian states. The 'State Energy Efficiency Preparedness Index' was prepared by the body in conjunction with Niti Aayog, India's policy incubator.
- The index assesses states on their progress in implementing clean energy projects and achieving energy efficiency targets. It includes 63 indicators along six lines - construction, industry, transport, agriculture, electricity generation and distribution and municipality.
- Kerala and Rajasthan achieved "front-runner" category on the index, along with Andhra Pradesh, Maharashtra and Punjab. The index breaks down each state's level of achievement in a specific sector. Kerala, for example, had a high rating in construction because of the effective implementation of energy conservation building codes, the number of certified green buildings and mandatory energy reporting and saving policies.
- Just like the top bracket, the other three other categories have slightly ambiguous titles. They are, in descending order, 'Achiever' (Gujarat, Karnataka, Tamil Nadu and Haryana), Contender, (Telangana, Madhya Pradesh, Uttar Pradesh, Uttarakhand and Odisha) and Aspirant (J&K, Bihar, Jharkhand, West Bengal, Chattisgarh and all the Northeastern states).
